Special Tribute to Andreas Lowenfeld Herbert and Rose Rubin Professor of International Law

Thursday, April 16, 2009

As Professor Lowenfeld enters his forty-second year of teaching at New York University School of Law, the Law School and the NYU Journal of International Law and Politics will pay tribute to his extensive and impressive scholarship at a conference to take place at the Law School on Thursday, April 16, 2009. The conference will focus on four areas of Professor Lowenfeld's work: Public International Law, Trade and Economic Law, Private International Law, and International Arbitration. Participants include judges, scholars, and practitioners whose own work has been influenced by Professor Lowenfeld. The papers presented will be published in a symposium issue of the Journal of International Law and Politics.

Bi-Annual Conference of the Journal of Private International Law*

Friday and Saturday, April 17-18, 2009

New York University School of Law is pleased to host the bi-annual conference of the Journal of Private International Law, the first English-language journal devoted exclusively to private international law. The conference brings together judges, scholars, and practitioners to discuss current issues of importance in this field. A special feature of the conference this year will be the wide range of early careers panels on Friday morning featuring the scholarship of young academics and advanced students from around the world.

* CLE credit will be given upon request.
